WASHINGTON, March 22.-Gen Alexander Haig jr. said yes-terday that the Atlantic alliance needs neutron weapons to counter-balance a buildup of battlefield nuclear weapons by the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact nations.

Gen. Haig, the allied military commander in Europe, said at a Pentagon news conference that the enhanced-radiation warhead would revitalize NATO's nuclear deterrent, which he said now relies too heavily on outmoded weapons of the 1950s and 1960s.

Three youths, believed by police to be members of the ultraleftist group GRAPO, shot to death the director of Spain's prisons system today in an ambush outzide his hame.

Interior Minister Rodolfo Martin Villa said that evidence in the slaying of Jesus Haddad. pointed to GRAPO. The Marrist - Leninist organization, the Oct. 1 Anti-Fascist Resistance Group, has a two-and-a-half year history of slayings, bombings and two spectacular kidnappings.

There was speculation that the killing was carried out in retaliation for the death last week in prison of an anarchist who had been beaten by jailers. The three attackers fired submachine-guns at Mr. Haddad, as his wife watched him leave for his office. The youths fired on Mr. Haddad, considered a reformer, through a rear window after he had taken a seat in the back of

The measure would apply to wivate-sector workers whose imployer has 20 or more on the payroll, or about 70 per cent of he labor force. And it would grant up to two years for age-65 etirement provisions to be phas-id out of existing labor union

The bill that was rejected yesterday started out as an innocuous attempt to reform the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1974. After the 1976 presidential election there was wide agreement that the law should require fewer and less complicated reports about campaign contributions. Many politicians also chjected to a provision that allowed the Federal Election Commission to make random audits of cam-

raign accounts, even when no

irregularity was alleged.

But last week, Democrats on the House Administration Committee surprised just about everybody when they pushed through a series of amendments to the reform bill. The main one would have reduced from $50,000 to $15,000 the total amount a party could give to its own candidates. It also cut from $10,000 to $5,000 the legal limit in contributions

This infuriated the Republicans who have raised about $18 million for this year's congressional races, more than three times the Democratic total. The aim, the GOP charges, was to guarantee the Democrats permanent control of Congress, and perhaps even to wipe out all effective opposition The Republicans yelled foul so loudly that even some Democrats were embarrassed at their colleagues' maneuver.

Farm Bill, Passed by Senate Links Prices Aid, Crop Cuts

By Richard L. Lyons

WASHINGTON, March 22 Southern farmers will have (WP) .- The Senate heatily passed yesterday a multibillion-dollar election-year farm bill that a supporter said would never bene law and which opponents said could raise food prices by $4 a week for a family of four.

[The Carter administration today criticized the farm bill as one of the most inflationers government actions in recent rs, according to a report by the Associated Press. The White House Council on Wage and Price Stability said that the bill add 2 to 5 percent points to the food-price inflation this year.)

The bill started out as an tempt: by Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Gas, to put cash quickly in the bands of hard-hit farmers with a land-diversion bill that would pay them an out of production this year at least 31 million acres of wheat, feed grains, cotton and soy-

But yesterday, with Sen. Tal-madge's support, the Senate voted 58 to 35 to add to his bill an amendment by Sen. George Mc-Govern, D-S.D., that would go in the opposite direction, encouraging more production by raising price-support levels by about 20 per cent.

Then the Senate approved, 55 to 39, a proposal from Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan, called "flexible parity," that would let a wheat, feed-grain or cotton farmer set his own price-support levels by a formula that would raise price supports in propor-tion to the amount of land taken out of production. It would raise both the target prices that the government agrees to give farmers directly and the loan prices that the farmer can borrow by "lending" his crop to the gov-

Resort Mayor a Driving Force in Wheelchair By Cynthia Gomey CRESTED BUTTE, Colo.,

March 22 (WP).-William Mitchell's face and hands were burned seven years ago in San Francisco. His motorcycle smeched into a laundry truck and the mctorcycle's gas tank blew up in Mr. Mitchell's face. A man across the street grabbed a fire extinguisher, simed it at the flames and sprayed.

Mr. Mitchell survived. With a rebuilt face, with stumps for hands with thick mottled burn scars from brow to waist, he packed up everything he could and moved to this easygoing mountain town where a man without much patience for suffering could live the cort of life he wanted. He tended ber. He learned to ski (without poles). He bought a house, a gleaming black 1939 Cadillac and a sixseater Cessna airplane to take him souring over the Rockies on the days-and there are many of them—when he couldn't sit still.

Two years ago, on a morning when too much ice apparently had formed on the wings, Mr. Mitchell's plane crashed on takeoff. It dropped belly-down out of the sky and the impact broke Mr. Mitchell's back. He had become a peraplexic.

Israel's Anxious Friends

Senate Foreign Relations Committee was perhaps the most important event on his Washington agenda. From old and close friends of his country, he encountered a markedly skeptical attitude of a sort to which Israeli prime ministers are not accustomed. The senators pressed Mr. Begin on his insistence on establishing new settlements in occupied territories. They questioned his view that the call for return of occupied territories in UN Resolution 242 does not apply to the West Bank. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill, later told reporters the settlements question "has divided Israel, divided the U.S Jewish Community and caused an erosion of support for Israel."

Israelis have long felt that presidents, influenced by bureaucrats calling their attention to other factors, cannot be counted on to respect Israel's view of its own security requirements; therefore, Israel must bring its political leverage to bear on the Congress. There lies the significance of Mr. Begin's luncheon. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, representing most Americans on this issue, feels a great attachment to Israel. But it has deep misgivings about the Begin government's response to Anwar Sadat. Few would sell short the considerable steps Mr. Begin has taken. Many ask whether he has done what is necessary to ensure that the opportunity before Israel is not lost.

Mr. Begin's luncheon on Tuesday with the Doubtless the temptation is great to attribute difficulties to Israel's political "enemies." or to look to events like the latest Palestinian terrorist attack or the counterattack into Lebanon to win sympathy and divert criticism. Some U.S. Jews have even tried to set up one particular administration official, Zbigniew Brzezinski, as a scapegoat. There is an understandable reflex at work. But there is a deadly illusion, too. It is that Israel can, to its own advantage, avoid the difficult choices that lie between

> It is for the Israelis themselves to face those fateful decisions. But it is for the U.S. friends of Israel, including the U.S. government, supporters on Capitol Hill and the U.S. Jewish Community, to offer their best judgment of what further policy changes from both Israelis and Arabs would best move the peace process along. This is not a question of "imposing" a settlement, least of all of "abandoning" Israel, but of adding honest counsel to the very substantial patronage that will and, we believe, should continue to be forthcoming in any event.

> Mr. Begin should be trying not merely to win backing for his policies but to understand what about them troubles so many Americans. If he can safely ignore Israel's "enemies," he must not ignore its friends.

Let Our Airlines Go

If airlines had the opportunity to choose their own routes and set their own rates, competition would drive down fares without reducing the quality of service. That's the idea behind the White House-backed airline deregulation bill that would give air carriers the right to lower fares by as much as 50 per cent and to enter new markets on a limited basis without prior government approval.

Thanks to the strong leadership of Senators Cannon and Kennedy, the bill has a good chance of passage by the Senate next . month. But deregulation is having a much tougher time in the House, where it has come up against bitter opposition from some of the airlines and their unions. Ironically the struggle to retain tight federal controls is being led by the conservatives on the House Aviation subcommittee.

In public, the opponents of deregulation argue that the proposed competition would create chaos as carriers maneuver for the best routes and bid for passengers with bargain fares. The disruption, they contend, would ultimately bankrupt the smaller and financially weaker airlines leaving the field to a few giants who would then raise prices and cut service.

The ruinous effects of competition are being described so vividly that we wonder how any industry manages to survive without the restraining hand of government. But one need not even look to the value of competition to other industries to see how silly the predictions of doom really are. In recent years, the consumer-minded Civil Aeronautics Board has been prodding air carriers to experiment with promotional fares. The result has been a drastic reduction in the cost of air travel on many routes—and a rise in airline profits. Flying full plane-loads at lower fares turns out to be more profitable than flying half loads at premium rates.

The private motives of the opponents of deregulation have little to do with consumer interests. One major airline, Delta, is prominent in the opposition because it has an extremely profitable route system and wants to keep it. It is financially strong enough to survive any potential shakeup of the industry, but apparently sees no corporate virtue in greater competition. Why the unions oppose deregulation is less clear. Labor might do very well under less regulation. Competitive fares should generate more passengers and more flights, and thus an increased demand for maintenance and ground service. But for the moment, it is the airline pilots who are calling the labor tune and they fear for their salaries. Under government regulation, the airlines have been permitted to pass on the princely wages of pilots to the public in the form of higher fares. With effective competition the carriers would have a stronger financial incentive to resist the pilots' demands.

Rarely is a public policy issue so clearly defined. ' Airline deregulation would mean lower fares for travelers and a chance for well-managed airlines to increase their profits. It would also mean less government interference in the private economy, and even a small check against inflation. The only apparent reason to maintain restrictions on fares and routes is to preserve the comfort of a few airlines and their pilots. Why should not the natural conservatives of the business and labor world selze this chance to roll back bureaucracy and regulation to give the free market a new respect-

International Opinion

Question of South Lebanon

The question is in which way the situation in South Lebanon can be normalized again. It would be normal if the Lebanese government, nominally exercising sovereignty over all Lebanese territory, would be able to exercise actual authority in the country's south. But there is not a bit of it for years. This is exactly the problem that contributed to creating a situation in which Palestinian guerrilla organizations could give all orders and that again led up to the Israeli operative response. In order to normalize things a situation has to be created in which Israel will be able to withdraw without the previous situation being restored. -From Het Parool (Amsterdam).

U.K. Curbs on Immigrants

What the report really means is that as many would-be immigrants as possible should be kept out, and that as many (as possible) of those who are already here should. be sent home . As the report itself admits, stricter enforcement of the rule concerning. right of abode would almost certainly require a new system of internal control of immigration with all that entails in the way of identity checks... Do we really want to move to stricter controls on movement, perhaps even to identity cards, for the sake of keeping out a few thousand Asians and getting rid of a few thousand more? How far is it from there to the pass laws? And is it really worth it? Accepting the committee's report would mean increasing the staff of the Imnugration Service, the Inland Revenue, the Department of Health and Social Security and possibly creating a new internal control service to boot.

—From the Financial Times (London). * * *

The first point of the report is that there must be an end to large-scale immigration . . . This country, broadly speaking, has had enough. No other country has been asked to accept immigration on such a scale —in relation to its size—and it is right now to call a halt . . . tighter controls are necessary. At the moment, around 50,000 nonwhite immigrants a year—the population of a small town-are accepted for settlement, as far as we can judge. A significant point about the report . . is that the Home Office statistics are unreliable. So we do not actually know how many immigrants are here, or how many are coming in. In this light, the major recommendations of this all-party committee will strike most people as simple common sense. We need an annual quota from the Indian subcontinent. We need a tougher approach to illegal immigrants and over-stayers . . and sanctions against employers who employ illegal immigrants would also be good . The committee's recommendations are tough but fair.

Carter's Message to the Kremlin

By Victor Zorza

WASHINGTON.—An unfortu- our commitments and to protect nate choice of words by President Carter is responsible at least in part for Moscow's misinterpretation of his latest speech, and the Kremlin's angry reaction to it. The first official Tasz commentary said that the President had announced a "mafor reassessment" of U.S. strategy, and Moscow understood this to mean that Carter had almost turned the clock back to the cold war. It detected "a shift of emphasis" from Carter's policy of negotiations, détente and limiting the arms race, "to a policy of threats and of building up ten-

~ Carter had indeed said that "we have recently completed a major reassessment" of national defense strategy. What he failed to make clear, however, was that the reassessment was completed eight months ago. It was last Amoust that Corter issued his Presidential Directive-18. a five-page document which is designed to serve as a guide in the formulation of foreign policy and national security. But the Kremlin's spies have evidently failed to get hold of the PD-18. The Soviet reaction to Carter's speech sperests an assumption on Moscow's part that the President has enunciated a completely new and much tougher policy, and that the Kremlin had to respond accordingly.

What's New?

What is new is Carter's public presentation of the main conclusions of PD-18, though without any reference to the original document. First, he said, the United States would maintain the strategic nuclear balance. Second, it would work with NATO to strengthen Europe. Third, it would build up forces "to counter any threats" to the "vital interests" of the United States and its friends in Asis, the Middle East and other regions.

The first of these is not new, since the maintenance of the strategic balance has been the objective of all previous administrations. The second, the European defense policy, is only half new. Previous administrations have paid lip service to it, but failed to carry it out fully because of their commitments in Vietnam and other preoccupations. It is in the third category, which used to be known as peripheral, that the Carter administration has made a real change. Carter says that the United States has "important historical responsibilities" in East Asia, in the Middle East, and in the Gulf. While his preference is to use international agreements to "minimize the threat of conflict" in these and other areas he goes out of his way to tell the Kremlin that he is prepared to act if provoked. "We have the will," he says, "and we will also maintain the capacity, to honor our interests in those critical areas." To this end the Defense Department is building up-at my direction"-forces which could be quickly deployed to any area. At a time when a Soviet-Cuban expeditionary force of ways choose the toughest. more than 10,000 men was quickly deployed to Ethiopia, Carter's warning about the Soviet Union's "ominous inclination" to intervene with military power in local conflicts, and his determination to have the forces with which to counter this, will not be lost on the Kremlin. But this is not a sudden response to the Soviet presence in the Horn of Africa. PD-18 had in fact anticipated possible Soviet adventures of this kind, and had therefore emphasized the need for a considerable is the real message Carter intended to convey to the Kremlin. improvement in the mobility of U.S. forces, and for the strengthening of conventional forces

ing. But the Kremlin concentrated its attention on those of Carter's remarks which it says are "incompatible" with his claim that the United States wants to avert a nuclear war. The Kremlin was paying attention to the new tone of the President's speech, rather than to its substance. Carter's theme was the need for U.S. strength in the face of the Soviet Union's growing power, and his intention was to assure both the Kremiin and his domestic critics that he would do whatever is necessary to meet this challenge. His speech was peppered with references to "strength—the final protector of liberty." The chances of war would be reduced by "demonstrated strength"; the United States would "maintain strength equal to the challenges" facing it. Those who would destroy liberty were restrained by the knowledge that "those who cher-ish freedom are strong." And so on and so forth.

Message Received

Moscow got the message. Most Western news reports ignored Carter's rhetoric and concentrated on the substance. But the Kremlin's analysts would no doubt have treated every one of Carter's flourishes with the respect they accord to their own leaders' assertions. Were they right to do so? Carter's speech had gone through several drafts, and both the hawks and the doves in his

In short, Israel is still living amidst all this beauty and ambiguity in a state of doubt and even of anxiety. When you leave the Tel Aviv airport, you're not only frisked head to ankle. but your bags are searched more carefully than at any other air-port in the world. Did anybody give you any "presents" to take aboard? Will you look carefully to see that your begs are still packed precisely as you packed them when you left your hotel?

In this atmosphere, one wonders how 3 million people in this remarkable country can continue to live in a state of tension surrounded by 100 million Arabs. Is there no other way? This is what many people seem to be asking here this Easter, especially the

"Youngsters who used Chisan bop gained an average of seven months." he said. "Those who didn't, and who had been ahead of the Chisanbop group at the outset of the test, only averaged 1.2 months."

Kenny Chianese, an 11-year old student in Mr. Castaldo's class, uses Chisanboo to count his change. "Salespeople ask me what it is. I explain, but it takes too long," he said. "It's faster than a calculator, though." Like any supplementary learn ing device, such as a calculator or bead board, Chisanbop can become a crutch.

One Mount Vernon teacher, who asked not to be identified, will not introduce Chisanbon to her class "Ultimately," she says, "the student must resort to the traditional methods on tests."

Says Mr. Lachterman: "There's the problem of transfer, of going from those devices to pencil and paper and ultimately using the head. But Chisanbop as the ultimate quintessential even if it is less inefficient and more portable than other devices, will be less of a detrimental

I.K. Reduces Steel Sector's 1978 Outlays

Capital Spending Rises 9.1% Overall in 1977

LONDON, March 22 (Reuters). Britain plans investment cuts and plant closures to curtail the losses of the state-owned British steel Corp. (BSC), according to a policy document made public

Plans to increase capacity at several steel plants have been scrapped, it said. The government also gave BSC the go-shead to negotiate the early closure of improfitable plants with trade unions. BSC's existing overseas debt would be serviced and repaid in full at the due dates, the document said, but added that the steel concern needed a substantial capital reconstruction program.

BSC is expected to post a record loss of about £500 million for the year ending March 31. Industry Secretary Eric Varley said "everything practical" will be done to provide alternate employment for those losing their jobs due to plant closures. The limit to government aid for BSC will be decided on a year-by-year basis, with the stateowned steel producer receiving £875 million in the fiscal year beginning next month.

Mr. Varley said the government had agreed with BSC that modernisation and expansion programs nearing completion would be finished and that programs to improve the quality of steel products should also go

The BSC capital spending program for 1978-79 will be about £500 million

The government said new cap-Ital needs for now would be met by subscriptions under the government's Iron and Steel Act. of 1975. It added that dividends on new capital would only have to be paid after reconstruction projects had been completed.

Levland to Receive Loan The government also announced that the National Enterprise Board has been authorized to advance a short-term loan of £275 million to state-controled British Leviand.

Mr. Varley said the loan is to enable Leyland—which just reported a £51.9-million loss last year—to repay some temporary borrowings and continue its capital expenditure program.

The BSC spending cuts were announced at about the same time that the Department of Industry reported that capital expenditures rose less robustly last year than had been fore-

Investment in the manufacturing, distributive and service industries totaled £4.076 billion in 1977, up 9.1 per cent from £3.735 billion the previous year.
Investment in the manufacturing sector alone rose 7.8 per cent to £1.761 billion. In 1976, such spending was at a 10-year

Below Earlier Forecasts The figures are seasonally adjusted and based on 1970 prices. Although there was a rise in spending both in the manufacturing sector and elsewhere last year, the increases were well below the 15-to-20-per-cent gainst the denartment had been forecasting at the start of last year. The department said increases of 20 per cent or more were recorded in the food, drink and tobacco sector and nonferrous metals. Above average increases were also seen in the engineering, shipbuilding, paper and printing and vehicles industries. On the other hand, investment in the steel industry, dominated by state-owned British Steel Corp., plunged 25 per cent last

The department also released figures showing that inventories held by manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers increased £338 million last year to £14.625

The rise occurred in the first half of the year as stocks declined £70 million in the third quarter and £58 million in the fourth quarter.

Foehl Defends Bonn-U.S. Pact

FRANKFURT, March 22 (Reuters),-The foreign exchange market's disappointment with last week's U.S.-West German monetary agreement is not justified, Burdesbank vice-president Karl Otto Poehi says.

In an interview, Mr. Poehl said the welcome new element in the agreement is that the United States has now shown its willingness to commit its own monetary reserves to support the dollar.

Mr. Poehl called the accord "a step in the right direction" and said it shows the United States has an interest in supporting the dollar. On the possibility of separate measures by West Germany to help the dollar, he said that the discount and Lombard rates, at 3 and 3 1.2 per cent, are already low enough and the impos of administrative controls on capital movements would create more problems than it would solve. Mr. Poehl said it is preferable that the U.S. payments deficit be financed through capital inflows rather than dollar buying by central banks, as happened last year.

The chances of a turnaround in capital flows. in the direction of the U.S., are thoroughly favorable" he said

Interest Rate Differentials This is above all because of the considerable differential between U.S. and German capital market interest rates, which is now more than 4 per cent."

"As soon as the dollar emerges from the crisis of confidence which has affected it, the attraction of dollar investments will soon assert itself," he

The chances the United States will soon start attracting capital from abroad are heightened by the growing feeling that the dollar's fall goes beyoud that justified on price and cost grounds, eral Reserve over the past few months has contributed to a buildup in liquidity in West Germany, and a boost in money-supply growth to well beyond planned rates, Mr. Poebl said.

The Bundesbank's benchmark central bank money stock was expanding at an annual rate of 11.4 per cent in February against the 8-per-cent growth target for 1978, he said.

But Mr. Poehl said the Bundesbank believes it can accept relatively strong liquidity in the economy for the time being, particularly as the deutsche mark's rise is leading to a lessening of

The country's inflation rate, at 3.1 per cent in February, will probably soon drop to under 3 per cent as a result of lower import prices and mestic market. Mr. Poehl said.

Tokyo bankers say that almost all of Japan's 13 biggest commercial banks have gone to the market recently, issuing either floating-rate or fixed-rate CDs. along with at least one of Japan's three long-term credit banks. The issue volume has been well over $150 million as of mid-March and is still growing.

The current funding actions have been triggered by a Bank Japan directive requiring banks to cover their long-term dollar loans by mid-1978 with equivalent amounts of longterm borrowings, Central bank officials say the measure is sim-ply intended to avoid the risks financing long-term loans with short-term credit, usually less expensive to obtain, as had been the mactice The Bank of Japan rule is not unduly restrictive since anthorities define long-term funding as borrowings for any period longer than a year. In theory, the Japanese can fund their fiveyear loans with borrowings for a term of as short as a year.

Long term, the banks also want to increase the dollar share of resources in line with their expectations of enlarging their role in international financing, Dai-Ichi Kangyo, for example, wants to raise the dollar share of assets to 20 per cent from the current 10 per cent in four or five years.

U.S. Profits Rise 10% in Quarter Survey Indicates

NEW YORK, March 22 (AP-DJ).-U.S. corporate profits rose about 13 per cent last year with fourth-quarter earnings about 10 per cent higher than a year earlier, according to a Citibank

However, the gains were linked more to a 13-per-cent increase in sales volume than to improved profit margins or rates of return, the survey showed. And, adjusted for inflation, real profits advanced less than 5 per cent from the year-earlier level.

Hourly employee compensation in manufacturing last year increased 8.9 per cent, as in the previous year, but productivity growth slowed markedly to 2 per cent, resulting in a 6.7-per-cent jump, in unit labor costs. Price increases did not quite close the consideration had not been triggered by the letter.

Officials conceded that a series of three government announcements of steps to shore up the dollar-most recently, an accord with West Germany—have not yet had the desired results, and that "some more definitive signal of a fundamental nature is going to be needed." Congressional approval of an energy conservation bill is cited as the most important signal. But pressure has also been in-creasing on Mr. Carter for a stronger anti-inflation program markets more confidence in the doller He has been urred to take stronger anti-inflation steps by Federal Reserve chairman William Miller, and by both Republican and Democratic members of the Joint Economic Committee. Additional anti-inflation measures have also been urged by the government's own wageprice watchdog, Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability. The administration reportedly considering creating a task force to see how U.S. exports might be stimulated as a means of reducing the trade deficitone of the sources of pressure on the dollar.

The idea of a task force has been pushed by the Commerce Department and endorsed by Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss.

"The answer to this nation's problems," he said in an interview, "is not in restricting imports and making the buying public pay more money when they're already choked by inflation, but the answer is a tremendous thrust from an export program."

But other officials, who concede that it would be useful to sweep away any artificial impediments to exports, caution that any benefits would not be gained in the short run, and certainly not quickly enough to ease current pressure on the

Righ on the list of potential actions to stimulate exports, according to informed sources, are tax incentives, even though the administration has rejected continuation of one form of export tax incentive, the DISC program, in its own tax bill before

Not all administration officials are sold on this approach, especially if it includes a politically embarrassing reversal on tax incentives for exports.

"Besides," says one unconvinced official, "if the United States tries to pay its oil bills by pushing exports into the less-developed countries with the help of Subsidies, that's hardly a contribution to global strategy."

Fukuda Plans To Raise Goal For Imports

Move Tied to Revised Surplus Seen for Year

TOKYO, March 22 (Reuters) -Japan's Premier said today he wants to increase the emergency import program designed to cut the country's massive currentaccount surplus to $6 billion in International Trade and Industry Minister Toshio Komoto sald that he and Premier Takeo Fukuda had agreed on such action after separate meetings with Wilhelm Haferkamp, vice-president of the Common Market

Talks May Be Extended Nobuhiko Ushiba, Japan's external economic relations minister, said separately the talks might be extended by one day through Priday to avoid a possible breakdown.

The problem appears to center on a joint communiqué planned for the end of the talks, in which the KEC wants Japan's assurance that it will cut its current-account surplus.

Mr. Komoto told a press conference he and Mr. Fukuda believed the current-account surplus for the fiscal year ending this month is certain to reach $13 billion, far above the official forecast of $10 billion made last October. Mr. Komoto did not specify details of the emergency program, but ministry officials said they were expected to be in addition to a four-point plan, which includes possible purchases of European commercial aircraft, announced by the government earlier this month.

Earlier, Mr. Fukuda and Mr. Haferkamp said they agreed to make efforts to avoid trade protectionism, Japanese officials said. During a meeting, Mr. Fukuda said Japan will strive to achieve its official economic growth target of 7% in the fiscal year start-ing next month to help world economic stability.

While continuing to emphasize energy activities, Tenneco's diversified, multi-market operations again produced record revenues, income and earnings pershare in 1977. Five of the company's eight major divisions scored increased profits while all eight increased Highlights of 1977 achievements include: Operating revenues reached $7.4 billion, the highest ever. Revenues have increased every year in the company's 34 year history.

 Net income exceeded $400 million for the first time, rising 10% over 1976 to $427 million. Fully diluted earnings per share rose to $4.11, up from $3.78 in 1976, with primary earnings per share of $4,38 as compared with $4,15.

The annual common stock dividend rate was raised to $2.00 per share, the sixth consecutive increase.

The reasons for Tenneco's growth are as diverse as the company itself: More efficient use of resources, evidenced by a rise in return on net assets employed to 16.3%. A long-term capital expenditure program which totaled $714 million in 1977, with more than half going for a major national need-development of energy resources and facilities. Internally generated funds increasing to $890 million in 1977. Carefully planned internal growth plus selective acquisitions to round out product lines.

1978 promises to be even better, with increases in earnings from our expanded energy activities.

ROBERT LUDLUM is back among the Nazis for his new conspiracy. The Nazis stand, of course, for unambiguous evil. It is a relief to be rid of ambiguity. which is as much an inflated currency in literature as in life. Solid evil, black gold, can be relied on. The good guys will be very, very good; the bad guys will be very, very bad; and every-body in between will be either a dupe or a victim. Instead of having to think, we will be tortured with surprises.

Ludium stuffs more surprises into his novels "The Rhineman Brchange," "The Gemini Con-tenders," "The Chancellor Manu-script," etc.—than any other sixpack of thriller-writers combined. Synopsis is a form of selfimmolation. But here goes: An American architect learns that his real father was Hitler's financial genius, whom his mother left early on in the ugliness. But, according to a Swiss banker, this father and two other high German officials, before they com-mitted suicide in the last days of the Third Reich, experienced remorse on learning of the deathcamps and set up a trust fund a tidy $780 million—to be distributed 30 years later to survivors and descendants of the Holo-

In order for this money to le released, the sons and/or daughters of the remorseful must gather in Geneva and sign some papers. The American architect sets out to find his co-signers, in Brazil, England, France and Germany. Many people die, because the money is actually meant to finance a Fourth Reich of Die Sonnenkinder—pure Aryan children smuggled out of Germany at the end of the war, now grown up and ready to take over. Getting in one another's way are M.I.s of British Intelligence, In-Verwunschkinder, the schanze, the Nachrichtendienst and the kibbutzim of Har Sha'alay in the Negev.

That's all the plot you'll wrest from me. Ludhum who seems to tolerate a certain amount of Aryan superiority, at least for evil: It takes an Aryan to foil an Aryan-finds his characters on the backs of cereal boxes, his prose in movie magazines, his sex in the want ads and his paranois in our dental cavities. Nevertheless, he pleases and seduces, telling his story like a man wix must get it done before the house burns down around us. I sprain ed my wrist turning his pages and didn't notice until an hou later, when I was hungry again for some ambiguity.

Janwillem van de Wetering specializes in ambiguity. Having journeyed to the East at an early age to become a Buddhist monk and then come back to join the Amsterdam police force, he coult not perhaps do otherwise. "The Blond Baboon" is his fifth Zer mystery. Indeed, the "baboon"whose principle of behavior is at ways to do the unexpected to flirt with his terrors-belongs a much to van de Wetering's non fiction ["The Empty Mirror," "# Glimpse Of Nothingness") as to his mysteries.

The story here is less important and less compelling that the moods, the fingerprints of character

South opened with four spades because his pantuer's original pass made it unlikely that a slam would be missed. When West led the dismond king and the dummy appeared, South would have heen happy to retreat to two spades. The chances of losing just two tricks in the major suits seemed very slim. He needed to find one opponent with a doubleton king-queen of trumps, a 3-per-cent chance, and there was a considerable danger of losingtwo heart tricks.

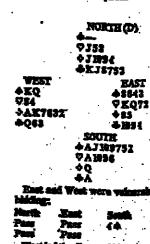

West solved declarer's heart problem by shifting to that suit at the second trick. From his saughe it was necessary to try for heart tricks before declarer could draw trumps and perhaps use dammy's chib suit.

South captured the heart queen with the ace, and led the space when without much hope. When the queen appeared, he cheered up considerably and made the correct play of a low spade, losing to the king. There was still danger of a heast ratif, but the trump length and the heart length were in the same hand, so there was no defense. The heart king was the third and last trick for the defense.

The Doggedness of the Long-Distance Swimmer

By Frank J. Prial

NEW YORK, March 22 (NYT). -One day in mid-July, if all goes well a young woman will stagger onto the beach at Key West, Fig., having completed what could be the greatest feat in the history of the cruel and lonely sport of marathon swimming-a 2 1/2day swim from Cuba, most of it complished in a shark cage.

"And that," said Diana Nyad, "will be it. I'll never do another long-distance swim. It is the most boring sport in the world." Nyad, 28, has been setting records as a long-distance swimmer since 1970 when she placed 10th in a 10-mile course in Lake Ontario. Her time, 4 hours 23 minutes, was a women's world record for 10 miles.

But the New Yorker did not achieve wide public acclaim until Oct. 6, 1975, when she swam the 28 miles around Marchattan Island in 7 hours, 57 minutes. On her first try, 11 days earlier, she

"That swim was a breakthrough for ma." she said. "You can do that kind of thing anywhere else, but until you do it in New York. it doesn't count." The Manhattan swim enabled Nyad to support herself with fees from speaking engagements ("I give motivational talks-I'm very good on motivation"), a few endorsements and a couple of book contracts. The Cuba swim, if successful, should mean even more in terms of commercial exploi-

"To my mind it's the greatest endurance feat in history." Nyad said, "but if anybody can make ft, I can."

The statistics are formidable. The longest marathon swim to date has been 80 miles from Chicago across Lake Michigan to Benton Harbor, Mich. Two men have accomplished it. The distance from Havana to Key West

Just before the long swim, she will let her weight go up to about 140, to give her an extra store of energy for the long pull, estimated at 60 hours. Nyad, who grew up in Fort Lauderdale, has been swimming since she was 13. Her longdistance efforts have taken her to Egypt, where she swam the Nile, and to Australia, where she swam off the Great Barrier Reef. "I think the time is right for the Cuba swim," she said, "It's a volatile time there—the whole women's thing-sharks-they're big now and the emphasis on the individual, and endurance, now that everyone is running "Ten years ago, it was Vince

Carter did some old-fast/cned arm twisting to get enough votes for the first part of the Panama Canal treaty vote in the Senate.

This was strongly denied not only by the White House but by senators who showed up the next day with their arms in slings Sen. Chishoim Chippendale told me he didn't think anyone in the Carter administration leaned on

"Well I don't know if it's worth mentioning but Ham Jordan came out to the house on Monday and offered to cut my lawn. I told him it didn't seem worth cutting because of the winter, so he said he'd mulch it for me."

"All by himself?" "No. Jody Powell came out thought that was real nice of those two boys, what with all they've got to do."

"Ham likes to mulch lawns." I told him. 'Then what happen-"Well, I was working in my

- Psychologists Find 'Beautiful Is Good'

By Leslie Bennetts

NEW YORK (NYT).—Beauty is as beauty does, they say. They're wrong Homey, oldfashioned adages notwithstanding, beauty doesn't have to do anything but exist for its impact to be nowerful-not to mention profoundly unfair.

So say the increasing number of psychologista and social scientists around the United States who have been studying a relatively new field: the role of physical attractiveness in a person's life.

In the last few years, this once neglected area has become the subject of all kinds of experiments—with results many researchers find costurbing. There are profound inequities in these genetic sweepstakes and they have far-reaching con-

One of the leading psychnicgists in the field is Dr. Eller Berscheid of the University of Minnesota, She and her colleagues discovered the existence of "a strong physical attractiveness stereotype: Attractive people are assumed to be kinder, more genuine, sincere, warm, sexually responsive, poised modest, sociable, sensitive, interesting, strong, more excit-ing and of better character" than the less attractive. Not surprisingly, they are also presumed to be leading happier lives, Such assessments even rub off on compartons: A man who is seen with a beautiful woman is viewed as more intelligent, exciting and successful than a man with an unattractive part-

Work Evaluation

The effects of this "what is beautiful is good" stereotype are pervasive, ranging over a broad spectrum of human interaction. One's abilities are often judged as a function of one's appearance, according to Dr. Harold Sigall of the University of Maryland, "We asked people to evaluate the quality of some-one's work," he said, "and found that the more attractive the person, the better the work was evaluated and the more ability was attributed to bim." At Old Dominion University tested professional personnel workers whose job was to make hiring decisions at employment agencies or corporate parsonnel departments. He found that attractive people were seen as more hirable and more likely to be successful at a given job than unattractive individuals with comparable qualifications.

Moreover, such biases begin to function early, Researchers at the University of Wiscourin and elsewhere have found that teachers discriminate on this same basis: If a child is attractive, he or she is assumed to be more intelligent, to have parents who are more interested in the child's education and to possess a wide range of other favorable attributes

A child's peers make similar judgments. A University of Minnesota sindy revealed that nursery-school children were already valued by their classmates on the basis of their physical appeal, the popular children being the good-looking

As if the positive fallout from good looks weren't enough, the negative impact of homeliness equally significant. "The children were asked to name someone they knew who scared them," Dr. Berscheid sakit "They chose unattractive class-

Furthermore, the old saying that mental patients were "very that "some people got away with murder" isn't far off the troi groups, that the more atmark. Another Minnesota study found that attractive and urnitractive children are perceived differently when they misbehave. With an unappealing child, a transgression is regarded as evidence of a chronic tendency to be bad whereas with a comely child, it is seen as a momentary aberration rather than evidence of a basic character flaw.

Later in life, such distinctions may have an even more devas-tating impact. Maryland's Dr. Harold Sigall' is among those who have tested people's reactions in simulated jury experiments. "If the offender is attractive," he said, "he will be treated more leniently by those recommending how he should be dealt with," unless he was seen as having used his looks to commit the offense, as in comping someone.

According to Dr. Sigall, acts ranging from social blunders to criminal offenses may be judged in part on the basis of the culprit's physical appeal. Others have investigated how such attitudes affect a variety of specialized situations. George Allen, a University of Connecticut psychologist, ob-served mentally retarded children in an institution and found that a small number of attractive ones received an overwhelming share of the attention given by attendants and supervisors. These children were also seen as being more mentally competent, even when they weren't.

A three-year study of adult oriminals conducted in conjunction with the New York Department of Corrections revealed that unless they were heroin addicts, convicts with visible deformities had a 36-per-cent lower recidivism rate after they underwent plastic surgery than those whose deformities went

At the University of Connecticut, Dr. Amerigo Farina explored the role of appearance in the development and treat-mates, both male and female." ment of mental illness. He found much less attractive" than contractive patients were better adjusted and the number of visitors they received was also a function of how good-looking they were. Moreover, says Dr. Farins, "The more attractive the patients were, the sooner they left the hospital, indicating that the duration of stay was more determined by physical appearance than by psychiatric condition."

Such results leave one with a chicken-or-the-egg dilemma: Do unattractive people become maladjusted because of the pervasive discrimination they may be subjected to? Some of Dr. Berscheid's work indicates that people may indeed adjust their personalities to the expectations of others

Privileged Caste

Such conclusions are unset tling to many people, partly because they conflict with some of our most deeply held beliefs. The thought that the goodlooking constitute a privileged caste that enjoys advantages solely because of external attributes appears to many researchers as not only undemocratic and unjust, but also extremely difficult to correct. Dr. Berscheld is distressed about the effects of these unconscious biases on children.

"They are being moided, and how children are treated very much affects how they turn out," she said. "That's the dangerous part, and why it's so important for teachers to be aware of all this."

Dr. Cash said he believes a certain social taboo about acknowledging that this kind of prejudice exists is one reason the whole subject has been neglected until the last few

"Even social scientists feel

N.H. Governor to Lower PEOPLE: Flags on Good Friday

has been filed to prevent it, Gov. Meldrim Thomson jr. of New Hampshire says he intends to have all U.S. flags on state buildings lowered in observance of Good Friday. He did it in 1976 and 1977, but this year three Unitarian ministers, an Episcopal priest and a rabbi have filed suit, maintaining that the governor's order violated the Constitution. Gov. Thomson called the suit "a nuisance action" and said, "It is hypocritical to drive from public office any evidence of religion and the Christian faith."

"Bools, bools" no more. Connecticut has chosen a state song to replace Yale's famed melody Winning over several other con-tenders was a slightly altered and unsexed version of "Yankee Doodle Dandy." The search for an official song began in 1972 after then Gov. Thomas Meskill in-formed the State Legislature that he was tired of hearing the Yale song at all the ceremonial dinners he had to attend. A bill signed by present Gov. Ella Grasso authorized the song competition, But the winner had a problem: The line "and with the girls be handy" was considered sexist by some, and so it was changed read, "and with the folks be
